About This Game

Story:

Recently, military drug experiments were ongoing to develop stronger and fearless soldiers – in essence, the perfect soldier. A new, injectable drug was developed to achieve this goal. Short term tests proved stable and consistent. The effects eliminated emotional responses, inhibited pain receptors, and established a primal state of increased aggression and instinct to kill.

Under wartime pressure to produce results, the brass demanded all test subjects be injected before long term testing was complete. Over time, the effects caused permanent brain damage locking the subject in the modified state without a need for more injections. The administration lost control of the project and the test subjects turned on the staff, killing all who remained.

Your mission is to destroy all test subject and end this experiment for good, if it doesn't end you first.
